

Abstract

An improved toroidal magnetohydrodynamic generator which uses ionized polar operating fluids and various internal coatings to maximize electrical output. The generator offers improved efficiency and safer operation compared to previous MHD generators due to its combination of existing research in bubble cavitation, sealed construction, and non-toxic operating fluids, as well as using the best aspects of conventional MHD design.